The City of Edmonton, Alta., is operating a hand paving plant for bituminous surfacing for street repairs with interesting and efficient results. The plant consists of a street tar kettle and stone heater; the materials are mixed by hand on a boiler sheet plate about 5-ft. square and hand tamped in place. This makes a very flexible and economical arrangement producing work of excellent appearance and fine wearing qualities, capable of resisting all ordinary traffic conditions. The cost of repair work of this nature averages about 75c. per sq.yd. The city is planning for the operation of a municipal paving plant.
